

Mountain high

ADLER LODGE RITTEN, ITALY ↑

Nestling between two mountain villages on the Ritten plateau in South Tyrol, the 40-room Adler Lodge Ritten was designed by local studio Hugo Demetz and G22 Projects to take advantage of alpine views and its proximity to Bolzano, a 12-minute cable car ride away. Though the main complex holds two wings of suites, arguably the best rooms are the 20 A-frame chalets scattered around the estate, their interiors, by Karin Sanoner, lined with larch and spruce and featuring terraces that open onto a panorama of peaks and forests. The spa answers all your demands at a mountain resort, including two saunas – one Finnish, the other cocooning a herbarium – in the woods. In the kitchen, Hannes Pignater serves up South Tyrolean and mod-Med dishes, such as spelt linguine and wild herbs, in a dining room where the ceiling slides apart to the open sky. DW

Lichtenstern 20, Oberbozen, South Tyrol, Italy, tel: 39.0471 1551 700, adler-resorts.com. Rates: from €249

■ TIMBER UP

Above, the A-frame chalets at Adler Lodge Ritten, some of which are set around a small lake, are lined with larch and spruce planks

■ BOX CLEVER

Below, Parilio echoes the island of Paros' distinctive white-block architectural style, with some suites offering private terraces with jacuzzi

Natural rhythm

PARILIO HOTEL PAROS, GREECE ←

The newest hotel on the Greek island of Paros is the work of Athens studio Interior Design Laboratorium, who inserted 33 suites into an existing series of buildings, its clean-lined Cycladic architecture the ideal frame for the rock-strewn landscape. Inside, the designers have dressed exposed concrete, terracotta floors and local marble in a quiet colour palette of white, grey, ochre and sienna. There's a wealth of vintage finds and contemporary design pieces, such as bedside tables from 101 Copenhagen and outdoor furniture by Vincent Van Duysen. The food, from chef Alexandros Tsiotinis, makes the most of the area's natural bounty. Lauren Ho Kolypithres, Naoussa, Paros, Greece, tel: 30.22840 51000, pariliohotelparos.com. Rates: from £207